Morris Family Reunion Held

The American Legion Building was the scene on Sunday, August 2, of the annual Morris Reunion. Relatives and friends gathered for this occasion and enjoyed a day of reminiscencing.

The Rev .Marvin Jacobs returned thanks, after which everyone enjoyed a bountiful spread of food.

One of the most enjoyable events of the day was a display of pictures of relatives taken at former reunions and of old family portraits.

Roll was called and a total of ninety-six were present. They were as follows:

Mr. and Mrs. Jennings Morris and children, Judy and Phillip; Mr. and Mrs. Bednego Morris, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Hamilton, Mrs. J. A. McFadden, Mr .and Mrs. Herbert McFadden and daughters, Pat and Dianne, Mrs. Dorothy Wilson, Mrs. J. E. Wilson, Mrs. Edith Tabor and daughter, Carol; Misses Rosalia, Delores and Karen Dinkins, Gary Dinkins, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Martin, and children, Eddie and Jo Ann; Mrs. F. B. Camper, and Mrs. Edell Carter, all of Lynchburg.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Munson and son, Skipper, of Chicago, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Morris and children, Mary Ann and Henry, of Colonial Heights, Va.; Mr .and Mrs. Joe Burrows, Mr .and Mrs. Thornton Carter Jr., and children, Thornton Lee and Tommy, of Richmond;

Mr .and Mrs. Carey Jefferson and daughters, Pamela and Brenda, of Amherst; Mrs. Joel Morris, Mr. and Mrs. Jutson Morris, Mr. and Mrs. Winston Martin and daughter, Gloria; Mr. and Mrs .T. R. Martin Jr., and daughters Fay and Janet, Mr. and Mrs .Robert Morris and children, Lois and Miller; Mr. and Mrs. Thornton Carter, David Carter, Albert Carter, Mr. and Mrs. Evans Ferguson and children, Linda, Kathy and Preston; Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Ferguson, Mr. and Mrs. David Ferguson and children, Doris, Betty and Tommy; Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Carter, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Richardson and daughters, Catherine, Cynthia and Jane; Mrs. Holmsley Inge, Misses Ruth and Mary Edith Ranson, Mr .and Mrs. James Carter and daughter, Carolyn, Mr. and Mrs. J .P .Almond and children, Brad and Roger, Mr. R. O. Jones and Mr. Littleton Lucado, all of Appomattox, and Mrs. J. S. Wright, of Lynchburg.

At Prospect, a large crowd attended the service, which was conducted by Dr. Twyman Williams, Presbyterian minister, and the Rev. Phillip Thomas, pastor of the church. Interment was in the Methodist Cemetery.

It was a yearly custom for Mrs. Henry Wheeler, of Crewe, to visit the Otis Gillioms, of Prospect, in the summer. For two years she had not been able to make it. Now, her doctor allows her to go up and down steps, so she arrived at the Gilliams' on Friday. Monday afternoon the Gilliams and Mrs. Wheeler called on the Miss Hixes.

Thursday, August 6, the Ernest Harwoods will start on a leisurely trip to visit Mrs. Harwood's relatives in California.

DAY-OLD VACCINATION SUBJECT FOR THOUGHT

Is vaccination of day-old chicks desirable?

This is a moot question in poultry circles, says D. D. Bragg, poultry specialist at VPI.

He points out that it is much easier to vaccinate day-old chicks than to catch an dvaccinate them at a later date. However, because of possible parental immunity and fact that chicks which are only a day or two old generally cannot react to the vaccine to produce a very effective immunity, this short-cut method often gives poor results. In addition, some reports indicate that dayold vaccination for infectious bronchitis may be somewhat responsible for part of the non-laying problems and other adverse vaccination reactions.

The use of water, dust, or spray methods for administering Newcastle and bronchitis vaccines has also made the labor needs for doing the job at an older age much less of a problem. Vaccination at 10 days to 2 weeks of age or a little later, with a second vaccination before the birds reach maturity, has therefore been recommended on many occasions, especially in areas where the risk is low. In some areas vaccination is probably needed before the chicks reach 2 or 3 weeks of age, and in those areas, early vaccination may be needed as the lesser of two evils, Bragg says.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

International Uniform Sunday School Lessons

BY DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN

Bible Material: Ecclesiastes.
Devotional Reading: Philippians 3:8-14.

Is Life Empty?

Lesson for August 9, 1959

THE COMMITTEE that chooses the "Uniform Lessons" represents more than 34 denominations. This quarter, as readers may have noticed, whole books of the Bible have been chosen. Unusual, indeed unique among these is the book called Ecclesiastes. It is not quoted by any New Testament writer. In fact, at the time of Christ debate was still going on among Jewish teachers as to whether to keep or discard this book from the sacred collection. It is a long way removed from the religion of the prophets, the apostles and of Jesus. For instance, it not only doubts immortality, it positively denies it. Whatever religion it pre sents in all of this world.

Dr. Foreman

The Religion of a Cynic

It was evidently written by a cynic, or a man whose cynical moments shadowed his writings. A cynic is not necessarily a sinner except so far as lack of faith is sin. The cynic is a man who has tasted the cup of life and found it—not so much bitter, as empty. Like a mournful refrain the words run through the book, "All is vanity and a striving after wind." "Vanity" here represents a Hebrew word which does not mean pride, but emptiness. The modern expression would be, "Nothing to it." Life (to the author of this book) is like one of the boxes you may buy in a toy store—on opening it you find another box, and when that is opened, there is another . . . and so on and on. But what is in the last box? Nothing at all. So life has gay wrappings, it promises a great deal, but at the heart of it—nothing but emptiness and a striving after wind. It is discouraging to see all the things the cynical author had found without value: work, wealth, fame, pleasure, novelty . . . Of love he only mentions it to say that there are times when hate is more appropriate. Of the life beyond he can only say "the dead know not anything." . . .

The Riddle of Ecclesiastes

Now a curious thing about this book is that here and there in it are flashes of something like religion. It is religion, but (as we said) not much like what Paul and John knew. Along with all the expressions of unfaith, of cynicism, there are some expressions of faith—a chilly kind of faith to be sure, but still faith; a crocus in the snow is not a summer garden, but still it's a flower. How account for the little crocus of the author's faith in the snowy waste of his cynicism? Various answers have been given. One is that this book is a sample of what little faith man can have without revelation; another is that one man couldn't have written the whole book, but that some pious editors added religious footnotes contradicting the irreligious pages. Another explanation is that this book was written all by one man, who had various moods. In his dark moods he lost faith in nearly everything, but in his better moods he could say, "Well, in spite of all that, nevertheless . . ."

Nevertheless . . .!

For there were some things in which this poor rich man could believe. It may be true, he says, that man toils for the wind, that he seldom is rewarded in proportion to his toil; nevertheless a man may find enjoyment in the toil itself. The days of life may be few, nevertheless they can be used as well as possible while they last. God may be far away; but nevertheless there is a God, and it is stupid to act as if there were none. Of God's love, this ancient writer has no conception; of his forgiveness he feels no need. He had never been through the furnace of suffering as Job had; he suffered from having too much, not from having too little. He had never found any one to love, or to love him, we may judge. In short, this man had lived on the glittering surface of life. Nevertheless, though the deeper experiences were denied him, though he did not know God at close range, though he knew no way to love God, nevertheless he could obey him, he could pay his vows even to the distant God. If this faith of the cynic is not saving faith, it still is on the way.
